EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS MADE AT YOST PARK FOR CONVENIENCE OF PUBLIC

George Yost, owner of Yost's park, has spent in the neighborhood of a thousand dollars in extensive improvements at his park, which lies between this city and Beloit. A large dance hall with a new floor, a bathing beach with bath houses and improvements on the diamond and other amusement attractions have also been made. The official opening of the season comes Sunday, when the fast Yeoman team from Beloit will cross bats with the Clinton League. The round trip fare to and from the park is twenty-five cents and it should prove, with its improvements, a most delightful place to enjoy an outing.

FOURTEEN AT DELAVAN FOR TWO DAY OUTING

Fourteen boys boarded the 10:40 train this morning enroute to Delavan, where they will spend two days of unadulterated fun. Every hour is to be taken up with some particular feature idea, which will keep the boys on the go continually. They are the boys of the "A" and "B" Junior division at the Y. M. C. A. and there is only one of the little outings that have been arranged for them through-out the summer.

They were met at the train at Delavan by J. C. Kline, who took them to the grounds on the lake. Here they are to bathe, play baseball, fish and indulge in every manner of sport that is healthful and that will furnish amusement.

The boys, who left this morning, were: Donald Black, Leslie Mohr, Douglas Cockfield, Francis Trock, John Taylor, Max Munson, Richard Brooker, Charles A. Schuler, Chester Baeck, David Allison, Osborne McDonald, Fred Brohm, Henry McNamara, and Ralph Pautz, accompanied by Physical Director Leask and J. C. Kline, also Charles Heald and Lloyd Jones.

ADJOURN McLEAN CASE UNTIL JULY SECOND

With the consent of the attorneys, the case of the city against George McLean, charged with violating the city ordinances in keeping a dog with a license was adjourned for a period of one week. Attorney Fred Burne appeared in court for McLean and with the consent of City Attorney Dougherty, the case was put over until July second. It was announced that there would be no dismission of the case, but that a fine would be demanded, the same as in the other cases for ordinance violation. McLean was refused a kenneled tag by the city officials yesterday until the outcome of the case pending in court.

CITY CLERK TAKES

BRIDE LAST NIGHT

John Peter Hammarlund and Miss Clara Bierkens Are United in Marriage.

Before about one hundred guests, Miss Clara Ottilia Bierkens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Bierkens, and John Peter Hammarlund were united in marriage last evening at the home of the bride's parents at 112 North Terrace. The wedding ceremony which was beautiful in its simplicity was performed by Reverend T. C. Thompson, the ring service being used.

After Oscar Hammarlund had sung "Because" and the wedding march by Hosmer played by Miss Hilda Hammarlund, the bride partly took her place beneath a bower of flowers. Miss Bierkens was charmingly attired in a dainty gown of white net with sequin trimmings and carried a large bouquet of white roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Helma Bierkens, who wore a silk mill dress, Miss Mable Koenig, who wore a white white gown and Miss Christina Halverson, of Stoughton. All three carried bouquets of pink roses. Master Edmund Bierkens, brother of the bride, was the ring bearer.

The groom was attended by his two brothers, C. O. and C. A. Hammarlund. After the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served, immediately after which the newly wedded couple disappeared on their honeymoon. Their destination was not known to their friends.

The bride is a very popular young lady among the younger set and until recently has been in the employ of the Bostwick company. She is well favored with friends and enjoys their highest esteem. Mr. Hammarlund is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Hammarlund, 702 Logan street, and is one of the city's most progressive young men. Since the administration of the commission form of government, Mr. Hammarlund has held the position of city clerk, being in no small way responsible for the success of the present administration in city government. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hammarlund have the well wishes of the community.

On their return from their wedding tour they will reside at 217 North Madison street.

Guests from out of the city were: Miss Camille Hosen, Edw. J. Hosen, Christine Halverson, Stoughton; Mrs. Mary Palmer, Mrs. Christine Peterson, Miss Olga Rosenquest, all of Duqueno, Iowa.

JANESVILLE YOUTH HELD AT LACROSSE

Theodore McCarthy of This City Charged With Stealing Pocket Book at La Crosse.

Theodore McCarthy, age 21 years, of this city, is under arrest at La Crosse, Wisconsin, pending a sentence from the court on the charge of larceny. McCarthy was in La Crosse on Sunday morning, June 21, and with several other Janesville youths, who are well known to the police here, was drinking in a saloon. Tuesday, an Eagle delegate named J. P. Sunday of Warren pointed his wallet out of his pocket while standing near McCarthy, who it is alleged seized the purse and dashed out the door. The police were called and the entire Janesville aggregation, who were not Eagles, in the saloon at the time was detained. McCarthy was identified by Wright and was brought before court Wednesday when he was held in lieu of $1,000. An effort is being made to locate his sentence as McCarthy blamed liquor for the cause of his misstep. In Janesville McCarthy is employed in hauling the mail from the railway station to the postoffice and this is the first time the Janesville police know of his being in trouble. McCarthy is married.

REV. R. M. VAUGHN TO PREACH SUNDAY

Former Pastor of Baptist Church Will Deliver Two Addresses, Morning and Evening.

Reverend Richard M. Vaughn, former pastor of the Baptist church in this city, will arrive in Janesville tonight and will remain in Janesville visiting friends until the middle of next week. Dr. Vaughn will preach at 10 Sunday morning at the Baptist church and will also occupy the pulpit at the union service which will be held at the same edifice in the evening. It is expected that there will be a large attendance on both occasions as Dr. Vaughn enjoyed a wide popularity in Janesville, not only among the members of the Baptist denomination, but among other church members as well. During their stay in Janesville, Dr. Vaughn will be entertained at the home of Mrs. Leavitt, 420 North Jackson street.

Dr. Vaughn at present holds the chair as professor of theology at the Newton Theological Seminary at Newton Center, Mass.

TWO MEN SENTENCED IN MUNICIPAL COURT TODAY.

John Openchan, a cripple, was arraigned in the municipal court this morning on the charge of being a vagrant, to which he pleaded not guilty and was committed to the county jail until his trial set for Monday morning at ten o'clock. Openchan was arrested last night in the act of "panhandling" and the finding of a number of post office receipts for money orders tended to convince the police in his begging craft. He had a little over $12 on his person when brought into court.

Ole Jerden of Stoughton, who was refused passage on a St. Paul passenger train, pleaded guilty to being drunk and was fined three dollars or five days.

MAN STRUCK BY FLYING BODY OF WIRE CO. AGENT; SUCCUMBS.

The final chapter in the fatal accident to A. J. McFavish, Detroit, the Janesville Park Wire Co. salesman, killed by a fast Milwaukee railway train at ten o'clock yesterday, was written in a Milwaukee hospital yesterday with the death of Joseph I. Morton, 78 years of age. In the impact, McFavish's body was thrown twenty-five feet. It struck Morton, breaking his right shoulder, several ribs and his right limb. Advanced age and his injuries proved fatal. Morton was a mail carrier.

ROBERT ERVING COMES BEFORE COURT SATURDAY
District Attorney S. G. Dunwiddie reported this morning that Robert Erving, who is charged with larceny to the amount of ten dollars, will be arraigned in the municipal court tomorrow morning at ten o'clock. The case was set for trial this morning.

FRANK FISHER WEDS KANSAS YOUNG LADY

Wedding Took Place on Monday Evening, June 11th, at Oberlin, Kansas—On Trip to the Fair.

On Monday evening, June 11th, at the home of the bride's uncle, Otis L. Benton, in Oberlin, Kansas, occurred the marriage of Miss Fidelia Benton to Frank Whitney Fisher, a well known practicing attorney at Janesville. The groom is a graduate of the state university and is in law partnership with his brother, John L. Fisher, at 28 West Milwaukee street. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Fisher. Only immediate relatives of the contracting parties were in attendance at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher will make their future home in Janesville, after November 14th. In the meantime, they will visit the San Francisco fair, and other Pacific coast points, going west by the way of Dresden.

Among the guests were all of the four brothers of the bride, and their families. Also the entire Fisher family was present, including Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Fisher, father and mother of the groom, and Mr. and Mrs. John L. Fisher, son Edward and Joseph Fisher, all from Janesville.

A WEE BIT PICNIC FOR THE CANNY SCOT

Dr. James Mills With Other Scotchmen of Vicinity, Receive Bid to Madison Picnic.

Dr. A. S. Alexander, well known to Scotchmen of Racine county, and to men of the veterinary science and also to breeder of pure blooded horses, particularly stallions, in a letter sparkling with canny Scot humor has invited Dr. James Mills of this city to the annual picnic meeting of the Dane County Caledonian society to be held at Monona park, Madison, tomorrow. He writes as follows:

"The Dane County Caledonian society will have a bit picnic at Monona Park, Madison, on Saturday June 26th, starting at 1:30 p. m. There will be some simple games of races, etc., and we have a local piper named Gow, who is giving the time up his drones, blize down upon the sheepskin under his oxters and astonish the natives and the surrounding atmosphere. I have not heard him play and he may be a poor apology for an artist for all I ken; but we'll trust to luck that he manage brawlie. There will be a basket picnic, and I hope there will be a good turn-out of the Scots from the district round about. Depends a good deal upon the weather, but it actually looks promising to-day. The picnic ground is on the lake and a bonny bit."

Dr. Mills will attend. Quite a number of others from Kock county are also planning to be there.

ALLEGED SPEEDER PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO CHARGE

John Clark, a former who resides east of the city, is under arrest in court this morning on the charge of violating the speed ordinance yesterday, when he was arrested by Motorcycle Policeman Chas. E. Milwaukee. Clark pleaded not guilty to the charge and his case was set for next Tuesday at ten o'clock. It is claimed by the defendant that at the time he was exceeding fifteen miles an hour within the city limits and that his speedometer, which was tested, did not register over the speed limit mark. No bail was required.

Party for Friends: Mrs. Frances Gerloff entertained a number of her friends Wednesday evening, in honor of some out of town guests. Those from out of town were: Mrs. Krause, Miss Erna Newman, Miss Gertrude Trupple, Mrs. Ed. Staeford, Ed. Low, John Wood, Joe Kissler, all of Chicago and Mrs. Albert Stark of Milwaukee. About twelve o'clock a five course supper was served by Mrs. F. Gerloff and daughter, Elsie. An enjoyable time was afforded those present.

HARVARD VS. YALE IN ANNUAL RACE ON THE THAMES TODAY

Blue and Crimson Have Met On Water 48 Times and Each Has 24 Victories To Credit.

New London, Conn., June 25.—The varsity eight-oared crews of Harvard and Yale universities meet on the Thames river course here today in their dual forty-ninth regatta. Both institutions send undefeated combinations to the starting line to represent them in one of the classic college competitions of the year. The crewmen hailing from New Haven and Cambridge have passed through a most successful preliminary racing season and as a result of their showing a gruelling four-mile race is expected by those who have followed the works of the eight all spring. There is unusual keenness for victory evinced at the training camps of both universities since Yale is anxious to continue her supremacy on the water as demonstrated last year while Harvard desires to renew the string of victories broken by the Elis' sensational finish of twelve months ago. With the expectation that another shell lapping race, similar to that of 1914, will mark the annual regatta of the Blue and Crimson, thousands of undergraduates and alumni are gathering here tonight and a record throng of spectators is predicted for tomorrow's regatta.

While the crew coaches and officials are non-committal, it is known that both universities believe that they have the best varsity eights of recent years and while none of those in authority care to claim victory in advance, they state freely and emphatically that the other oarsmen will know that they have been in a real contest before the finish line is reached. This is taken to indicate that both coaches and strokes have planned for a high speed race from start to finish in the hope of killing the rival crew before the final half mile mark is passed.

Although neither combination has figured in a four-mile race this spring, their time rows at this distance and the preliminary races, ranging around two miles, indicate that the Harvard and Yale eights are fairly even in speed endurance and rowing technique. Each crew has rowed in two short races and each has won its dual regattas in impressive fashion. The Elis oarsmen opened their season on April 3 by defeating Pennsylvania in a 5.16-mile race in which the winner's time was 7 min. 56 sec. On May 15, Yale met Cornell and Princeton in 1 1/2 mile race on Carnegie lake, winning by a few feet from Cornell in 9 min. 09 2/5 sec. with Princeton third.

Harvard's first race was at Annapolis on April 24 when the Crimson eight defeated the Middles rather easily in a race of 1 1/2 miles, winning in 6m. 52s. One week after Yale had won from Cornell and Princeton at Princeton, the Harvard crew raced Cornell on Cayuga Lake and defeated the Cornell varsity crew by a length at the end of a two-mile row which the Cambridge combination covered in 10m. 41 2/5s. The showing made by Harvard in this race led to the general opinion among rowing experts that the Crimson crew was a trifle better than the Yale eight that defeated Cornell seven days previously.

There has been little change in the coaching system or personnel since last year. Guy Nickolls, the English oarsman, devoted last autumn and this spring to instructing the Yale crew candidates while Jim Wray has held sway at Cambridge and Red Top this season as for a number of years past. Nickolls has followed the English system of selecting oarsmen early and not changing the combination unless absolutely necessary. The Blue crew is virtually the same combination today, that rowed against Pennsylvania in a snow storm on April 3.

Harvard has shifted her sweep swingers more frequently but the varsity eight as selected by Coach Wray for tomorrow's race has no eleventh-hour choices. The Crimson will have a slight advantage in veteran material with race experience for in addition to the men who rowed in the long race last year Wray had the splendid second eight of 1914 from which to recruit. This crew, which won from Yale easily last June and then went to England and captured the Grand Challenge Cup at Henley, has furnished several experienced oars for the 1915 varsity including the stroke.

Unless weather conditions interfere the regatta program will be run off in a manner similar to last year. The varsity four mile race will be rowed upstream, starting from the railroad bridge and finishing in Bartlett's Cove, close to the west bank of the Thames. The two preliminary regatta events will be rowed in the forenoon and on the lower reaches of the course will be used. The second or substitute varsity crews will row over the two-mile course from the Navy Yard to the railroad bridge starting at 10:15 a.m. and the freshman eight will race over the same stretch of water thirty minutes later.

The history of the Yale-Harvard crew regattas dates back to 1852 when the first of the annual races was held on Lake Winnepesaukee at Center Harbor, N. H. This contest was really an interclass affair in which Harvard 63 class crew defeated the Yale Eight in a two mile row in barges, the time being approximately ten minutes. Three years later on the Connecticut River at Springfield a Harvard eight-oared and four-oared crew defeated two Yale six-oared boats the Crimson barges finishing one, two in the three-mile race. In 1859 two shells and two barges represented, informally, the two universities at Worcester, Mass. in a three-mile race. Again the Cambridge oarsmen won both classes but the next day Yale reversed the result of the shell race.

The following summer crews raced over the same course, Harvard winning. The Civil War put a stop to the sport until 1864 when the war was renewed and continued until 1870 over the Lake Quinsigamond three-mile course at Worcester.

In 1871 Harvard, aided by Brown, Amherst and Yale organized the "Rowing Association of American Colleges" and a three-mile straightaway race was rowed at Springfield. Yale did not compete that year but entered in 1872 and the entries grew in number until in 1875 there were thirteen crews at the starting line: an American record which still stands after forty years of college rowing. Beginning in 1876 Yale and Harvard inaugurated their four-mile dual regattas rowing at Springfield. Two years later the course was shifted to the Thames at New London and the regattas have been held annually, with one or two exceptions ever since forming one of the biggest inter-collegiate sport events of the

SOX WIN NINETEEN INNING BATTLE, 5-4

Red Faber Pitches Eleven Innings and Allows But Four Hits—Zimmerman Wins Game for Cubs.

Cleveland, June 25.—Weighed down by five straight defeats, the Cleveland Indians yesterday and kept the Chicago White Sox busy for a full nineteen innings, the battle terminating in a victory for the Sox by the score of 5 to 4. Since the Cubs won the nine-inning battle recently, the Sox had to duplicate the feat.

The combat was truly a wild affair, for the Indians broke into the run column in the first inning, with two tallies, and the Sox forged ahead in the eighth, getting three runs on Mitchell, who had been pitching great ball until that session. Back came the Indians and latched on to two more runs to their lead by hitting Cicotte hard. The Sox, refusing to be whipped, tied it up in the ninth, and the battle stood until the nineteenth. The Indians were called to the docket after Cicotte was benched and the Sox heaver is credited for the major part of the victory. Morton replaced Mitchell in the ninth and proved a worthy foe of the Sox heaver. Two were gone in the nineteenth when Weaver singled and Eddie Collins scored the run by a double to tie the fence.

The Great Zim.

Chicago, June 25.—Heinie Zimmerman, the great, whaled out a double in the ninth inning when he was up as a pinch hitter with two runners on the base line. Perdue was pitching for St. Louis, and after getting two strikes on Zim, sent a wide high ball across. Zimmerman "leaped the willow" on the ball for two bases and two runners scampered across the pan. Doak was sent to the mound for St. Louis and while he was tending to that, Zimmerman took a long lead, a couple of steps and a long slide for the plate. The final score of the game was 14 to 13.

When the going first sounded Zabel and Robinson were the pitching stars and later they gave way to Meadows and Standridge. Perdue and Cheney were then rushed to the scene because of the heavy batting. The fifth inning was marked with a murder of the pitching as the Cubs scored five and three the next round. St. Louis pounded across five in their half of the sixth and both sent four across in the ninth.

The average sport follower can't understand how Walter J. Travis, who is now nearly fifty-six years old, can still go on winning golf championships from many of the country's best players. After a thorough study is made of this quiet, middle aged marvel of the links, it is discovered that Travis, after years of incessant playing, has reduced the game of golf to a science, that he knows within a couple of feet the exact carrying power of each one of his clubs and that he is never out of practice. He is on the links every week of the year. These are the reasons why he can still compete successfully against men whose images are like Jerry Travers, Percy Platt and John G. Anderson.

For many a year, the National league has depended upon the large crowds at the New York Polo grounds to pull the weaker clubs through financially, but this year the situation is far different. Because of the long slump of the clubs, the attendance at the Polo grounds has not been equal to that of other seasons and the entire league has felt the change. No longer can they recuperate in New York the losses sustained at home and in other cities.

CARS ARE TUNED UP FOR START SATURDAY

Twenty-Three Cars Will Face Starter Tomorrow Morning in Record Breaking Speed Grid.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Chicago, Ill., June 25.—When Starter Fred Wagner pulls the trigger of his starting gun at Chicago's great Speedway Park course at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, twenty-three racing automobiles will be facing the wire.

The elimination trials, the final of which was held on Tuesday of this week, brought to an end the friendly rivalry which has marked the daily workout at the speedway and although there were two cars ruled out, only one failed to circle the two-mile track at a rate of 85 miles an hour. The Berwyn Baby, a freak car built and piloted by a Berwyn, Ill., inventor, failed miserably when offered a clear track on Monday and the owner, fearing the worst, did not attempt to qualify on Tuesday.

Ed Limberg, the elongated driver who runs a Sunbeam, was eliminated, although he covered the distance at a clip better than ninety miles an hour. A rule of the American Automobile Association prohibits the competition of more than three cars of any manufacture and therefore, one of the Sunbeams cars was destined to fall by the way. In order that the manufacturer draw a fair break in the elimination, the cars entered all try for time and the three high men qualify, the fourth withdrawing. Limberg was the unfortunate driver in this case and he will be scratched, although his running partner, Grant, may elect to choose him as a relief driver.

While no records were broken in the final trials, fast time was made by several of the cars. A speed of one hundred miles an hour was struck early in the running and averaging at the way from 90 to 100 miles was the order of affairs. The fact that the trials on Tuesday did not bring out the speed shown on the first day should not be taken as an indication that the cars are slowing down. On the contrary, the drivers are becoming accustomed to the course and are making no changes, but are contented with marks safely above the qualification zone.

Automobiles bearing state license tags of every state in the union are pouring into Chicago and the hotels are well crowded. Thousands upon thousands are coming to the big race over the railroad routes, but the surprisingly large number of auto fans is most gratifying to the officials in charge.

The Way of Going.

And after all it may be best, just in the happiest, sunniest hour of all the voyage, while eager winds are kissing every sail, to flash against the unseen rock, and in an instant hear the billows roar above a sunken ship. For whether in midsea or among the breakers of the farther shore, a wreck at last must mark the end of each and all. And every life, no matter if its every hour is rich with love, and every moment jeweled with joy, will at its close become a tragedy as sad and deep and dark as can be woven of the warp and woof of mystery and death.

—Robert Ingerson.

Make 'Em Get "SKITCH" For You

"SKITCH" is Woman's Right—a 10 Cent Package of "SKITCH" Puts the Wash-Board Out of Business

Here's the way to act about SKITCH. Women here's how one woman got rid of washboard laundry and found washday peace. Read this letter from the Range Mercantile Co. of Merrill, Wis.: "The wife of the vice-president of our firm tried SKITCH and now wants us to get some of it, as she claims she would not be without it. Please quote prices on goods. No wonder she wanted it. SKITCH saves all the rubbing of clothes, all the back-breaking washboard work, all the soap now used in rubbing and all the wear on the clothes! And SKITCH positively can't hurt the finest fabric ever woven. SKITCH is so harmless you could even eat it. Get a 10-cent package of SKITCH or your grocer and see if he doesn't have it. ## To Put On Flesh And Increase Weight

A Physician's Advice.

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.

For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is a scientific combination of six of the most effective and powerful flesh building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.

When Raymer had gone, the opportunity which Broffin had so lately craved was his. Miss Grierson was left alone on the big veranda, and he had only to step out and confront her. Instead, he got up quietly and went back through the lobby with his head down and his hands in his pockets, and the surviving bit of the dead cigar disappeared between his strong teeth and became a cud of chagrin. There had been a goal in sight, but Miss Grierson had beat him to it. "And the winner of the small handicaps? With a deep breath-drawing that was almost a sob, Miss Grierson sprang up, stole a swift confirming glance at the empty chair behind the window hangings, and crossed the veranda to stand with one arm around a supporting pillar. And since the battle was fought and won, and the friendly pillar gave its stay and shelter, the velvety eyes filled suddenly and the ripe red lips were trembling like the lips of a frightened child.

CHAPTER XXI.

All That a Man Hath.

For four entire days after Margery Grierson had driven home the nail of the elemental verities in her frank criticism of the new book, and Charlotte Farnham had clinched it, Walshe's public places saw nothing of Griswold; and Mrs. Holcomb, motherly soul, was driven to expostulate scoldingly with her second-floor front who was pushing the pen feverishly from dawn to the small hours, and evidently in the kindly widow's phrase—burning the candle at both ends and in the middle.

Out of this candle-burning frenzy the toiler emerged in the afternoon of the fifth day, a little pallid and tremulous from the overstrain, but with a thick packet of fresh manuscript to bulge in his pocket when he made his way, blinking at the unwonted sunlight, of out-of-doors, to the great house at the lake's edge.

Margery was waiting for him when he rang the bell; he guessed it gratefully, and she confirmed it.

"Of course," she said, with the bewitching little grimace which could be made to mean so much or so little. "Isn't this your afternoon? Why shouldn't I be waiting for you?" Then, with a swiftly sympathetic glance for the pale face and the tired eyes: "You've been overworking again. Let's sit out here on the porch where we can have what little air there is. There must be a storm brewing; it's positively breathless in the house."

Griswold was glad enough to acquiesce; glad and restfully happy and mildly intoxicated with her beauty and the loving rudeness with which she pushed him into the easiest of the great lounging chairs and took the sheet of manuscript away from him, declaring that she meant to read it herself.

When it was over, and he could not tell whether the interval should be measured by minutes or hours; the return to the realities—the hot afternoon, the tree-shaded veranda, the lake, dimpling like a sheet of molten metal under the sun glare—was almost painful.

"It is wonderful—simply wonderful!" he said, drawing a deep breath; and then, with a flush of honest confusion to drive away the work pallor: "Of course, you know I don't mean the story; I meant your reading of it. Haven't anyone ever told you that you have the making of a great actress in you, Margery, girl?"

"No."

She was smiling across at him, level-eyed. "Let me pass it back to you, dear boy," she said. "You have the making of a great novelist in you. It may take years and years, and—and I'm afraid you'll always have to be helped; but if you can only get the right kind of help."

She looked away, out across the lake where a stiff breeze was turning the molten-metal dimples into laughing wavelets. Then, with one of her sudden tooth-wrenchings: "Speaking of help, reminds me. Why didn't you tell me you had gone into the foundry business with Edward Raymer?"

"Because it didn't occur to me that you would care to know, I guess," he answered unsuspectingly. "As a matter of fact, I had almost forgotten it myself."

"Mr. Raymer didn't ask you for help?"

"No; it was my own offer."

"But he did tell you that he was in trouble?"

"Yes," hesitatingly.

"What kind of trouble was it, Kenneth? I have the best right in the world to know."

Griswold straightened himself in his chair and the work-weariness became a thing of the past.

"You can't have a right to know anything that will distress you."

well tell me. Mr. Raymer had borrowed money at poppa's bank. What was the matter? Did he have to pay it back—all at once?"

There seemed to be no further opening for evasion. "Yes; I think that was the way of it," he answered.

Griswold expected something in the nature of an outburst. What he got was a transfixing glance of the passionate sort, quick with open-eyed admiration.

"And you just tossed your money in to the breach as if you had millions of it, and by now you've almost forgotten that you did it!" she exclaimed. "Kenneth, dear, there are times when you are so heavenly good that I can hardly believe it. Are there any more men like you over on your side of the world?"

At another time he might have smiled at the boyish frankness of the question. But it was a better motive than the analyst's that prompted his answer.

"Plenty of them, Margery, girl; too many for the good of the race. You mustn't try to make a hero out of me. Once in a while I get a glimpse of the real Kenneth Griswold—you are giving me one just now—and it's sickening. For a moment I was meanly jealous; jealous of Raymer. It was only the writing part of me, I hope, but—"

He stopped because she had suddenly turned her back on him and was looking out over the lake again. When she spoke, she said: "See! The breeze is freshening out on the water. You are fagged and tired and needing a bracer. Let's go and do a turn on the lake in the Clytie."

From where he was sitting Griswold could see the trim little catboat, resplendent in polished brass and mahogany, riding at its buoy beyond the lawn landing-stage. He cared little for the water, but the invitation pointed to a delightful prolongation of the basking process which had come to be one of the chief luxuries of the Merside afternoons.

At the landing stage Griswold made himself useful, paying out the sea line of the movable mooring buoy and hauling on the shore line until the handsome little craft lay at their feet. Strictly under orders he made sail on the little ship, and when the captain had taken her place at the tiller he shoved off; and when the helmswoman had laid the course up the lake, Griswold, pipe filled and lighted, piloted his head in his clasped hands and a great contentment, flowing into all the interstices and leveling all the inequalities, lapped him in its soothing flood.

He was still half-dozing when he was made to realize that the murmuring rush of water under the catboat's forefoot had changed into a series of resounding thumps; that the wind was rising, and that the summer afternoon sky had become suddenly overcast. The pretty tiller maiden was pushing the helm down with her foot and hauling in briskly on the sheet when he sat up.

"What's this we're coming to?" he asked, thinking less of the changed weather conditions than of the charming picture she made in action. "Weather," she said shortly. "Look behind you."

He looked and saw a huge storm cloud rising out of the northwest and spreading like a great gray dust curtain from horizon to zenith. "There's a good bunch of wind in that cloud," he said, springing to help his companion with the slatting mainsail. "Hadden't we better lie up under the island and let it blow over?"

"No," she snapped. "We'll have to rest, and be quick about it. Help me!"

He helped with the reefing, and the great mainsail had been successfully reduced to its smallest area and hoisted home again before the trees on the western shore began to bow and churn in the precursor blasts of the coming storm.

"It will hit us in less than a minute; how about weathering that island?" he asked.

"We've got to weather it," was the instant decision; "we can't go around." Then, the catboat still hanging in the wind's eye: "Help me get her over."

"Hadden't you better let her fall off a little more and run for it?" he suggested, and he had to shout it into the pink ear nearest to him to make himself heard above the roaring of the wind and the crashing plunges of the boat.

She shook her head and made an impatient little gesture with her elbow toward the storm-lashed raceway over the bows. Griswold winked the spray out of his eyes and looked. At first he saw nothing but the wild waste of whitecaps, but at the next attempt he made out the hotel steam launch, half-way to the entrance of the southern bay and a little to leeward of the Clytie's course. The small steamer was evidently no sea-bat, and with more courage than seamanship, its steersman was driving straight for the inn bay without regard for the direction of the wind and the sea.

"That's Ole Jalyerson!" cried the tiller maiden with scorn in her voice. "He thinks because he happens to have a steam engine he needn't look to see which way the wind is blowing."

"She's pitching pretty badly," Griswold called back. "If he only had sense enough to ease off a little."

Suddenly he became aware of the finer heroism of his companion. He knew now why she had refused to take shelter under the lee of the island, and why she was holding the catboat down to the edge of peril to keep the windward advantage of the laboring steamer. "Margery, girl, you're a darling!" he shouted. "Take all the chances you want to and I'm with you, if we go to the bottom!"

She nodded complete intelligence and took in another inch of the straining main sheet.

Griswold looked again, this time over the catboat's counter, and saw a big schooner, close reefed, hauling out from a little bay on the north shore. The launch's plight had evidently impressed others with the necessity of doing something. The need was sufficiently urgent. Once again the Swedish man of machinery in charge of the craft in peril was inching his helm up in a vain endeavor to hold the course, and the little steamer was rolling almost funnel under. Griswold forgot his companion was a woman and swore rabidly.

"Look at the fool!" he yelled. "He's trying to come about! If he gets into the trough—"

The thing was done almost as he spoke. A wilder squall than any of the preceding ones caught the upper works of the launch and heeled her spitefully. At the critical instant the steersman lost his head and spun the wheel, and it was all over. With a heaving plunge and a muffled explosion the launch was gone.

Once again Griswold was given to see the stuff Margery Grierson was made of in the finer wars and wool of her.

"That's for us," she said calmly; and then: "Help me get another inch or two on this sheet. We don't want to let those people on the Osprey do all the heroic things."

"That's for us," she said calmly; and then: "Help me get another inch or two on this sheet. We don't want to let those people on the Osprey do all the heroic things."

"What's this we're coming to?" he asked, thinking less of the changed weather conditions than of the charming picture she made in action. "Weather," she said shortly. "Look behind you."

He looked and saw a huge storm cloud rising out of the northwest and spreading like a great gray dust curtain from horizon to zenith. "There's a good bunch of wind in that cloud," he said, springing to help his companion with the slatting mainsail. "Hadden't we better lie up under the island and let it blow over?"

"No," she snapped. "We'll have to rest, and be quick about it. Help me!"

He helped with the reefing, and the great mainsail had been successfully reduced to its smallest area and hoisted home again before the trees on the western shore began to bow and churn in the precursor blasts of the coming storm.

"It will hit us in less than a minute; how about weathering that island?" he asked.

"We've got to weather it," was the instant decision; "we can't go around." Then, the catboat still hanging in the wind's eye: "Help me get her over."

"Hadden't you better let her fall off a little more and run for it?" he suggested, and he had to shout it into the pink ear nearest to him to make himself heard above the roaring of the wind and the crashing plunges of the boat.

She shook her head and made an impatient little gesture with her elbow toward the storm-lashed raceway over the bows. Griswold winked the spray out of his eyes and looked. At first he saw nothing but the wild waste of whitecaps, but at the next attempt he made out the hotel steam launch, half-way to the entrance of the southern bay and a little to leeward of the Clytie's course. The small steamer was evidently no sea-bat, and with more courage than seamanship, its steersman was driving straight for the inn bay without regard for the direction of the wind and the sea.

"That's Ole Jalyerson!" cried the tiller maiden with scorn in her voice. "He thinks because he happens to have a steam engine he needn't look to see which way the wind is blowing."

"She's pitching pretty badly," Griswold called back. "If he only had sense enough to ease off a little."

Suddenly he became aware of the finer heroism of his companion. He knew now why she had refused to take shelter under the lee of the island, and why she was holding the catboat down to the edge of peril to keep the windward advantage of the laboring steamer. "Margery, girl, you're a darling!" he shouted. "Take all the chances you want to and I'm with you, if we go to the bottom!"

She nodded complete intelligence and took in another inch of the straining main sheet.

Griswold looked again, this time over the catboat's counter, and saw a big schooner, close reefed, hauling out from a little bay on the north shore. The launch's plight had evidently impressed others with the necessity of doing something. The need was sufficiently urgent. Once again the Swedish man of machinery in charge of the craft in peril was inching his helm up in a vain endeavor to hold the course, and the little steamer was rolling almost funnel under. Griswold forgot his companion was a woman and swore rabidly.

"Look at the fool!" he yelled. "He's trying to come about! If he gets into the trough—"

The thing was done almost as he spoke. A wilder squall than any of the preceding ones caught the upper works of the launch and heeled her spitefully. At the critical instant the steersman lost his head and spun the wheel, and it was all over. With a heaving plunge and a muffled explosion the launch was gone.

Once again Griswold was given to see the stuff Margery Grierson was made of in the finer wars and wool of her.

"That's for us," she said calmly; and then: "Help me get another inch or two on this sheet. We don't want to let those people on the Osprey do all the heroic things."

FORM ORGANIZATION TO BOOST REST ROOM

MRS. JENNIE DOWER AND MISS HATTIE ALDEN NAMED OFFICERS AT MEETING.

REVIEW OF MOVEMENT

Full Report Outlining Various Plans Considered—Vote Down Library Location.

(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.)

A meeting of the committees appointed from the various women's clubs to consider the rest room proposition was held on Thursday afternoon at the library. A permanent organization was formed and officers elected to serve until September when the new year of club work begins. Mrs. Jennie Dower was elected president and Miss Hattie Alden, secretary.

A general report of the rest room movement was given as follows: "To one who has studied the subject, it is interesting to note the locality most favored in other cities in the placing of the rest rooms. I think by far the largest proportion are found in parks. In the west, especially, it is the custom to build a pretty little bungalow for a public comfort station at a convenient place near the entrance of the park, so that it can also be used on occasions as a waiting room."

In our own city the arrangement of the park with its fine sweep of green sward and shrubbery, and the house as a background, almost prohibits the erection of any such building anywhere in the lower park. But the more general use of this beautiful "breathing" place, especially by children during the summer season, suggests the need of some such convenience for their care, in the immediate vicinity.

"The next places in point of favor are the public buildings of a town—the court houses, the city hall, the library buildings. Even the school houses when not entirely occupied by school needs or the buildings belonging to the local fair grounds are being utilized more and more for this purpose. The slogan of 'Public Buildings for the Public' has been recognized more and more in recent times. It was this same idea of having the public buildings used, to their full capacity, that caused the passage of that law by the state legislature of last year, making it compulsory upon school officials and library boards to grant the free use of their rooms for meetings, lectures, and for whatever would promote the good of the community. The idea is that all branches of the public service—whether educational, civic, literary or agricultural—be banded together, by the ties of civic betterment, and are all working together to improve conditions in their own community."

It was with this purpose in mind, that a few of us who had considered the subject, and who realized the great need in the city of a rest room, bethought ourselves of the plan of utilizing the large rooms in the basement of the library building. We realized that this equipment of the spacious rooms, the large hall for baby carriages, the ample and comfortable toilet and waiting rooms and the rest, which is furnished, whether the room is used or not, could not be obtained in any other place for less than six or eight hundred dollars a year. And these rooms are not needed at present for the use of the library proper, and are practically not utilized for any other purpose, they seemed especially available."

"With this idea in mind we have organized and worked as you very well know, toward the end of having a public comfort station located here, with the park close by, the interurban station, the stores, the cafes and most of the garages within a block or so. It seems the ideal place for an institution of that kind. It is the center of public demonstrations, circus parades and whatever things of like nature take place in the city. You know, the permission of the library board has been obtained for the use of this part of the building provided the special work of the library, and that its up-keep and care be provided for in other ways. As you know, committees are ready and funds are available for this purpose. And now the question has been raised as to whether the women of the city who are backing this project are really in earnest in regard to it. And whether, also, they are in need for such a place in the city, and if it will become popular with the public. It has been darkly hinted that this plan is simply a fad and will fall through, with its own weight after a few weeks' trial. With this idea in mind the 'Power' that be' have asked that the plan be tried out, in some form, before any money be spent on the library building in this connection. There were two propositions suggested. One was to make use of the library rooms as they are at present, utilizing the rear exit to the basement, as an entrance on Park street, and the alternative was to hire some moderate priced room or small store in the immediate vicinity, and near the park, to try out the proposition in that way during the summer. The latter plan is not feasible at present as nothing convenient and suitable for the purpose can be obtained. So we have been obliged to give up that idea for the time being. Now the outlook at present resolves itself into two plans that are open to us. First, to take up with the library rooms, equipping them with the necessary conveniences, the rear entrance as best we may, till such time as a more convenient doorway be provided; and the other way is to keep our organization going and watch out for some suitable room or store where the project may be housed, and an opportunity given to demonstrate the feasibility and usefulness of the idea."

"It is hoped that we may have a 'heart to heart' talk over the matter, with the fact in mind that we are none of us trying to force through any scheme, but that we are all working for a public service. We want to find out what is the greatest need in this direction and how we can best serve that need."

After this report was given a free discussion followed. The sentiment was plainly against the plan of trying to open a rest room in the library building unless a convenient public entrance could be made. A vote was taken on the subject as to whether the room should be used as at present with the rear door on Park street as an entrance, and the vote was unanimously a negative. A committee was appointed with Mrs. Jennie Dower as chairman, to consider further ways and means regarding the room. The question was also brought up of maintaining a rest room at the fair grounds during the season of the fair.

Mrs. J. R. Nichols was made chairman of a committee to see what arrangements could be made in regard to that project. After other matters of business were brought up, the meeting adjourned, to be convened again on call.

Recapture of Galician's Oil Fields

Washington, D. C., June 24.—The oil fields of Galicia, which have been alternately in the possession of the Austrians and the Russians since the war's outbreak and which are now again under Austrian control, are among the most important petroleum sources of the world, says a bulletin just issued by the National Geographic society at Washington. "These oil fields, situated in the northern foothills of the Carpathians, within southern central Galicia, and lying some distance below and to the east of the Austrian fortress, Przemyśl, produce about 5 per cent of the world's total annual output of petroleum, coming, thus, fourth on the list of the most important sources of this fuel. The United States leads all countries by a magnificent margin in the production of oil, turning out 24,500,000 metric tons of the world's total petroleum in normal times, of 46,600,000 metric tons in the year 1914; therefore, has to its credit nearly 10 per cent of the total output. This country is followed by Russia, Mexico, and then, Galicia."

"While among the earliest fields to attract attention in the petroleum industry, coming into prominence as early as 1878, the Galician oil fields are only partially known and developed. These fields, beyond comparison the richest oil fields in operation anywhere in Europe, and, there are indications that the future will see an increase rather than a decrease in their working area and in their productivity. The modern petroleum industry had its beginning in the United States, starting to all practical purposes about 1858. The drilling of the Galician oil wells soon followed those of this country. Almost coincident with the birth of the Galician oil industry was that of the Russian oil industry at Baku. The enormous rich Russian wells, yielding about 20 per cent of the world's total output, were opened about 1875.

"Dobobrycz and Boryslaw are centers of the Galician oil industry. The high plain, southward to the Carpathian hills, from Dobobrycz to Boryslaw, is the petroleum region. This district lies southward from the sources of the River San, in the higher Carpathians, and south southwest of Lemberg. The annual production of the Galician wells has been around two million metric tons a year, and the number of wells has been slowly but steadily increasing. The growth of this country has, as in other places where petroleum resources have been developed, largely to the prosperity of Galicia, a land that some few generations ago was one of the most miserable poor to be found in Europe."

"The Dutch East Indies and neighboring Rumania have uncovered oil resources sufficient to make a strong competition with Galicia, and prominence in the industry during the last few years. Rumania is sixth upon the list of petroleum-producing countries, and may have furnished large stores of this precious fuel to the German allies during the occupancy of the oil region by the Russian invaders. The course of the Austrian oil lands is toward Bukovina and Rumania, in the line of the Carpathian foothills. "These Galician wells are of special war importance to the German powers as being, not only the most important source of their petroleum supply, but their only internal source of any consequence of this most necessary fuel. With these wells under their control, their stores of oil are large and certain, without them, the central powers are forced to turn to uncertain foreign sources. The enemy nation, Russia, on the east, is assured of an inexhaustible supply of oil from its vast wells at Baku, whose security the Turks threatened up to now in vain. Great Britain is able to draw upon the wells in the neutral countries of the world, with every prospect of safe delivery. Rumania, practically, the sole foreign source of oil for Germany and Austria."

The Man of God

By REV. J. H. RALSTON
Secretary of Correspondence Department,
Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—Behold now, there is in this city a man of God.—I Samuel 1:10.

It is quite significant that the term "man of God" occurs about forty times in the Bible. In the Old Testament, Moses, Samuel, Elijah, David and many others, were so designated. In the New Testament the term is applied to the young pastor Timothy, and in a letter to Timothy, the "man of God" is urged to become thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

The man of God must be born of God, a partaker of the divine nature, as the Spirit plainly taught through Peter. It is at this point that many make shipwreck of their faith or doctrine, not seeing that the new birth is absolutely necessary, and forget the teaching of Jesus that some men are the children of the devil. This last thought is not complimentary to man, nor is the spirit that man manifests in the oppression of the weak by the strong, nor the thorough selfishness manifested in much commercial competition, nor hate, that is illustrated in the present European war.

Intercourse With God.

The man of God will have much intercourse with God, and this must necessarily be mutual. In olden time God spoke directly to some who were known as men of God, but in these days he speaks to us by Jesus Christ, who is only made known to us through the Bible. It is inevitable, therefore, that a man of God must study the Bible, not as an intellectual stimulus, which it would be, nor to secure the best code of ethics ever offered to man, nor to fortify himself for doctrinal debate, but in order that he may know God's will. His attitude in taking up such study should be that of the little Samuel, who is spoken of in the text as the man of God, and who said, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." Man must also speak to God, and this is by prayer, about which much error is held, especially that it is a mystical and mysterious exercise that some timid souls fear to undertake. Yet to the man of God it is the most natural thing in the world. If this mutual intercourse is intimate and frequent, the man will grow more and more into the likeness of God, just as human beings grow more and more like each other because of intimate contact.

Man of God, God's Man.

The man of God will be the representative of God, his champion. This at once involves the necessity of courage and a good store of common sense. In these days, which are certainly not altogether regenerate, God needs men in every walk of life to be his representatives. In the business world he wants men of tender conscience; in the political world men who make no pledges except to himself; in the social world men and women, too, who despise the tricks of social custom; in the realm of morals men who stand squarely for temperance, Sabbath-keeping, pure language and clean life. At this point the man of God must not forget that he is human. The only one to whom the term "God-man" may be properly applied was no less a man than God, or whom it was rightly said, "Behold, the man." One is not necessarily a man of God, because he withdraws to the monastery, the cave of the wilderness, or takes such a view of the world that he positively refuses in any way to deal with Caesar or the rulers that are ordained of God. There is no greater honor awaiting the true Christian than to compel the world to say that he is God's man. He may be a busy farmer, a mechanic, or a day laborer, a railroad president, the head of a great institution, or the president of the United States.

Recognition by the World.

The man of God should be recognized by others as such. Samuel was known to Saul, in what way we do not know certainly, as the man of God. The man of God must let his light shine, but this must always be in recognition of the fact that light never makes any noise in its shining. In letting light shine there is more likelihood that the man attracts opposition rather than approbation. Some men have proved that they are men of God because they have stood alone in small companies, protesting against the evils that they see the majority fostering. Jeremiah in Jerusalem, Daniel in Babylon, Paul in Athens, Martin Luther in Germany, John Knox in Scotland, and others, were almost alone in their stand for God, but in the end the cause for which they stood triumphed.

An electric sign in the city of Chicago reads: "Sooner or later you will be at the —," and then says, "Why not sooner?" Sooner or later every man will want to be a man of God. Why not sooner?

DAVID THE SHEPHERD OF ISRAEL

(THE REVIEW.)

Saul must remain forever the pitiful example of a colossal failure. He had all the elements of an over-achiever. He was a consummate warrior; valiant himself, he inspired valor in others. He knew how to mass and deploy, and when, where, and how to strike. First in the new order of kings he lacked the advantage of precedent, the support of the deficiency with a native genius for statesmanship, a crude sense in which it was impossible to glean anything from example. But, in spite of all advantages, personal ability and opportunity, he missed the mark. When the moral autopsy of Saul is made, ambition will be found his deadly malady. It clouded his vision, confused his judgment, enervated his will, made him the easy prey to melancholy, led him to throw over his wise and godly monitor and consort with vile witches. It filled his mind with the venom of jealousy, and prompted him to the murder of his supposed rival to the purple.

True as this diagnosis is, it is fairly impossible to detect when and how the deadly malady began. Its growth was by imperceptible stages. It might easily have been cured in its incipency, but Saul seemingly deliberately aggravated it. He heeded neither the warnings of God nor man. He clutched for power, when he felt it receding from him, as he clutched at the prophet's mantle. He nursed the poison of ambition until it filled his mind, his being, so that cure was impossible. The case was remediless. Saul was already dead, dead to God, dead to his nobler self. There is nothing to do but to draw the wound, and let the poison out. The body of Saul was not an arbitrary matter or piece of caprice on the part of Providence. It was just as necessary as the expulsion from the orchestra of the musician who will not observe the director's baton. Saul malignantly persisted in striking false notes and thus spoiling the harmonies of a divine melody. He was repeatedly admonished and given new opportunities, but he was bent upon striking such notes as he pleased. "The king shall be long in the land," the shepherd boy of Bethlehem ascends the throne. "Blood will tell." The king-elect had an untarnished train of noble ancestors. He inherited the purity of integrity of David and the devoted fidelity of Ruth. It matters little whether the divine culture of the young king-elect was mediated immediately. Samuel may have been his mentor as he was Saul's. Saul, he may have taken a course in one of the divinity schools. The mediocrity methods are in no way inimical to the immediate influence of the Spirit of the Lord. Which came upon David at the time of his anointing, "from that day forward." However, that may be when the hour of coronation came, kindly as it was, was matched by kindly character. The manifold and imperative exactions of a station which has no exact parallel in history were met by a versatile character, developed and matured to meet these exactions. David could both compose battle-hymns for his army and in person lead to battle. He could make law and administer it. He could maintain the equilibrium of his throne, close and the man of affairs. With a master-hand he changed the whole face of Hebrew history.

Saul lacked David's piety. It is the secret of his prosperity. Even his courage had its root in his religion. Love to God inspired his deeds of valor. It was his religion which made him accept the challenge of Goliath. Religion was at the root of his mercy as well as his courage. That was what led him to spare Saul when the latter was in his power. Religion was the cement of his immortal friendship with Jonathan. Religion indicated to him the bringing back of the ark, an act far-reaching in its effect upon the nation. It was his worship and making Jerusalem pre-eminent as a center of religion for a thousand years. Religion struck the keynote for his deathless hymns. It was the religion that set the "nightingale of the psalms" singing for all dark nights of sorrow to the end of time. It is the surprise of this ancient annals that one who was so weak, who was so humble, so simple and so generous as to seek the scion of a rival house in order to make him the companion of his court, could stoop to the hardly next next neighbor. But it is the unique and admirable characteristic of the Bible that it does not attempt to present a series of ideal perfect characters who could be copied by the masses. The king's crime is a cunningly devised fable. To admit a fault would be thought to spoil it all. But the Bible proves its divinity by the fact that it pictures its heroes just as they are, with all their faults, virtues or extenuate. So the foul plot on the escutcheon of Israel's proudest king is shown with minute particularity. Enervated by luxury, David fell to the snare of the devil's favorite nets, the mesh of which is as soft as silk, but strong as steel. Sin follows sin with astonishing rapidity. A moment of royal vanity is unsparingly exposed. The prophet's pathetic parable calls out a royal edict worthy of David's better self, but it closes with the thunderbolt, "Thou art the man!" David might have expiated himself from public confession and acts of reparation by reasons of state, but he did not. He made a clean breast of it. There was no evasion in his penitential psalm. As ever, God brings honey out of the eater. Without condoning David's sin, it is made a means of revealing the possibility and blessedness of forgiveness. The king's crime is a red lantern swung across the path of the tempted. It is a sharp voice crying, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." But the same light it utters the note of comfort when it seems to add, "Let him that falleth not despair!" This last noble Hebrew hymn is easily recognized as the cry not of the Hebrew, but of the cry of all men. It belongs to all languages, lands, and times. It is all men's psalm. It voices the aspiration of humanity, its supreme moral need. Nor is there any confusion in the writer's mind. He is not addressing impersonal law, blind force, or unintelligent order. To him God is a Person. Mind to understand man's need. Will to relieve. Heart to pity his frailty, and almightiness to do for man what his mind perceives, will decries, love prompts.

AT MYERS THEATER.

"The Tigris," Madame Petrova, Popular Italian Musical Comedy.
The star of the Alca release, "The Tigris," Madame Olga Petrova, has played in practically every country in the world in which there is a theater or a vaudeville house. She is a naturally lived in many lands for extended periods and speaks many languages. Her very life shows this same cosmopolitanism.

Madame Petrova, however, has added a new experience to the many of her life in appearing before the cameras of Popular Plays and Players, Inc.
The new screen star was born in Warsaw. She did not remain there long, but was educated in Paris and Berlin. Then to continue her career in the United States, she came to America, making her first appearance on the stage in London with Lord Anglesey at the age of 20.

Early in her career, Madame Petrova got the idea of appearing in single acts from famous successes, surrounded by her own company. She was successful in France, Germany, Russia, Austria, South Africa, Australia and over the world generally.
But since this ambitious young woman had determined to conquer the world, she could not leave America out of her calculations. Accordingly, she arrived in New York June 26, 1911. After early artistic struggles here, she jumped into fame overnight in vaudeville at the P.M. Avenue Theater, New York. Her appearance in legitimate drama was a natural sequence. Her success in that field is too recent to require recital.

And now to her many experiences in many parts of the world Madame Petrova adds that of a player in the screen drama.

Madame Petrova in the Popular Plays and Players, Inc. production, "The Tigris," is to be at the Myers theater tonight.

Amusements

(Notices furnished by the theatres.)
AT MYERS THEATER.

"The Tigris," Madame Petrova, Popular Italian Musical Comedy.
The star of the Alca release, "The Tigris," Madame Olga Petrova, has played in practically every country in the world in which there is a theater or a vaudeville house. She is a naturally lived in many lands for extended periods and speaks many languages. Her very life shows this same cosmopolitanism.

Madame Petrova, however, has added a new experience to the many of her life in appearing before the cameras of Popular Plays and Players, Inc.
The new screen star was born in Warsaw. She did not remain there long, but was educated in Paris and Berlin. Then to continue her career in the United States, she came to America, making her first appearance on the stage in London with Lord Anglesey at the age of 20.

Early in her career, Madame Petrova got the idea of appearing in single acts from famous successes, surrounded by her own company. She was successful in France, Germany, Russia, Austria, South Africa, Australia and over the world generally.
But since this ambitious young woman had determined to conquer the world, she could not leave America out of her calculations. Accordingly, she arrived in New York June 26, 1911. After early artistic struggles here, she jumped into fame overnight in vaudeville at the P.M. Avenue Theater, New York. Her appearance in legitimate drama was a natural sequence. Her success in that field is too recent to require recital.

HOG CHOLERA SERUM MANUFACTURED HERE

INDIANA MEN ERECTING PLANT
IN SPRING BROOK—INSTALL
ELABORATE EQUIPMENT.

OUTPUT NEXT AUGUST

Forty Days Required for First Serum to be Made—May Make Other Bacteriological Products.

If there is a strictly clean and up to the minute sanitary spot in Janesville, it is the corner of the corner of the corner, it will be a tract of seven lots in Spring Brook, just this side of the site of the old Athletic baseball park. And Uncle Sam himself will see to it that this spot is kept clean and sanitary.

The cause is that another member of Janesville's family of manufacturing industries is being added. This will be a laboratory for the manufacture of hog cholera serum for hogs. The first of the product will be turned out late in August.

The building for the production of the inoculation is well under way. It is expected that it will be completed by July 1. It is a small and unpretentious structure of one story, the wings built at a right angle, a little over seventy feet long and forty-eight and forty-six feet in length, respectively. In here, however, between $5,000 and $8,000 worth of the latest and most modern equipment for a plant of its nature will be installed.

The outer walls are of cement blocks. The interior will be floored with cement and the walls coated similarly. This is done to permit of keeping the building strictly aseptic.

Dr. A. C. Ross and H. E. Garrison, formerly of Conover, Ind., where they were engaged in similar laboratory work and also from the Indiana state experiment station at Purdue university, are the men behind the project. Both Dr. Ross and Mr. Garrison have spent many years in the work and their ideas of producing the anti-cholera serum is recognized as one of the most efficient in its work, to be secured.

Dr. Ross and Mr. Garrison brought their plant to Janesville unhesitatingly. For some time past they had been looking over different sections of the country with the idea of locating. They desired to manufacture their product in a good swine growing section.

After inspecting many sites they learned of Janesville and Rock county and decided to investigate. In a quiet manner they became acquainted in the city and conversant with local men close in touch with the information they desired. Trips through the agricultural districts and the demonstration of the information they secured relative to Rock county being a big swine breeding center were strictly authentic and that there was the ideal site for their location. Hence the plant in Spring Brook.

A period of approximately forty days must elapse following the starting of the process before the serum is ready for market. Providing the building is completed by July 1 and the necessary equipment installed shortly afterwards, it is expected that the first output of the serum will be made late in August.

The plant operates under a license granted by the United States government. No license is awarded a company in the manufacture of this product until a building has been erected and has been inspected and passed upon by the federal bureau of animal industry. The federal bureau is extremely strict in its granting of permits for the serum manufacture and demands that the highest state of sanitation and efficiency be maintained at all times.

The new firm will employ a force of three salesmen on the road, starting late this summer. A peculiar feature, but one in which the individual can readily grasp the feasibility is that in the interstate sales of serum many states demand that the product reach a certain state of efficiency before permitting its sale or distribution within its boundaries. Indiana, for instance, has this law, and manufacturers without the state wishing to find a market there, must permit the state experiment station to pass on their product previous to permitting its sale. Indiana law, however, provides that the state shall pay for all samples used in the experiment.

MORE BOYS REGISTERED FOR GOOD ROADS CONTEST

With over fifty miles of road now being worked and improved by the boys of Rock county, in the different townships, the Good Roads contest looks like a successful proposition. Between thirty and forty boys are earnestly at work, each striving to outdo his neighbor in building up the best road at his particular point.

Wednesday, George S. Parker and Peter Anderson, the latter the chairman of Fulton township, visited that township and secured nine more entries. They were: Ed. Polk, George Scofield, Harold Pratt, Herbert Murrin, Robert Burr, George Bublitz, Roy Nelson, Willie Gordon and Lester Dorr.

Yesterday I. F. Wortendyke, John McVicar and Andrew Warner, chairman of Lima township, made a canvass of that township and secured four more enthusiasts. They were: William Perry, Merrill Elphick, Ernest Zillmer, and James Powers.

There is now a seven and a half miles of road in Johnston, eleven in Harmony, seventeen in Clinton, eleven in Fulton, and five in Lima, making a grand total of fifty-one and one-half miles of highway under the process of improvement at the present time. Each boy has from one to three miles to take care of and all are to have an even chance at the prizes, which will be awarded after the first of October, the closing date of the contest.

Today Hugh Craig and Chairman Moseley of Beloit township left for that section to arouse the boys and secure more entries.

INSURANCE COMPANY IS NOT HOPEFUL OF EARLY PEACE

London, June 25—Lloyds is apparently not hopeful of an early peace, as its members are now making a cent insurance to pay a total loss if peace is not declared by December 31.

VACATIONS FOR DAIRY COWS

Six Weeks Rest is None Too Long for Animal to Rest Between Lactation Periods.

It is fairly well understood that the dairy cow should be given a vacation or a rest between lactation periods. The longer the rest up to a certain point the better it is for the cow. Ten and one-half months continuous milking out of every twelve is all that can be reasonably expected. It is claimed that it is as hard on a cow to produce a liberal yield of milk daily as it is for a horse to work at hard labor all day. When this is fully understood the necessity for a few weeks' rest on the part of the cow becomes evident.

Furthermore, the cow during seven or eight months of the milking period is carrying and developing a calf, which is a further drain on her system. If she is given a few weeks to repair her worn-out body tissues and to store up a little excess fat she will give more in the entire year, than she would milking continuously. If not given a rest before calving, she begins a new lactation period at a lower level of production, and will maintain a lower level through the entire time. Six weeks is none too long for any cow and if she is badly run down ten or twelve weeks will be better.

CREAM OF HIGHEST QUALITY

Can Be Produced With but Little Labor or Expense—Principles Involved Are Simple.

One of the most common causes of poor quality butter is the lack of immediate, thorough cooling of the cream after separation. The dairy division of the United States department of agriculture has made a careful investigation of conditions on a large number of dairy farms, and the data obtained show that, if properly cooled, cream of the best grade can be produced with but little extra labor or expense. The principles involved are very simple and are easily understood.

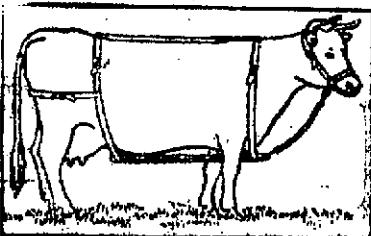

A liberal use of ice which has been stored in winter to be used the following summer is one of the requirements for the solution of the poor butter problem. Farmers who already are delivering good products to the creamery usually have provided for themselves a convenient source of supply for the ice, suitable houses for storing the ice and ice water tanks for the immediate cooling of the milk and cream.

In parts of New England, although the dairymen often hold cream on the farm four days in the summer and seven days in the winter, they deliver practically all their product while sweet. After it reaches the creamery it is pasteurized and shipped a distance of from 50 to 300 miles, and may well be sold in these remote localities in the form of sweet cream.

HARNESS FOR SUCKING COWS

Smooth Pole Extending Between Fore
Legs to Near the Udder Prevents Animal From Cheating.

The harness illustrated in the accompanying photo has been found satisfactory in preventing cows from milking themselves. A smooth pole extends between the fore legs to near the udder, and is suspended by two straps over the back, one around the flank and by a light chain to the shaker. The cow wearing such a device will find it impossible to reach far enough to cheat her master.

Bull Pen is Essential.
The bull pen is a necessity on every farm. It is unwise and injudicious to allow the bull to run at liberty with the cattle.

Influence of Dairy Bull.
The dairy bull has an influence on the heifers of the entire herd, while the cow influences one calf each year.

WOMAN NEAR DROWNING AT THE MASONIC PICNIC

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Brodhead, June 25.—At the close of the Masonic picnic Thursday afternoon a boat ride was planned to Decatur Park, and when passing through the headgates to the raceway one of the boats containing seven ladies and two men was capsized. All were easily rescued except Mrs. Scott Brobst, who was in the water so long that she was unconscious and was with difficulty resuscitated. She is somewhat better today but is much the worse for her terrible experience.

LAUGHABLE COMEDY AT MYERS THEATRE

Pretty Irene Fenwick Delights Audience in the Irresistibly Funny Comedy, "The Commuters," in Film, Yesterday.

Just because Carrie, the maid, was dirty, slangy, lazy, incompetent, and just because a commuter must have some occasional diversion downtown after dark, Larry Brice phones his wife the usual excuse about business and proceeds, with his friend, Rollie, to "do" the Long Island cabarets. When the confetti-throwing stage is reached, Larry, with rare good aim, bounces a ball of serpentine off the sweating, bald head of "Sammy," eccentric, excitable Italian director of the cabaret orchestra. Reconciliation, wine and spaghetti follow and in a moment of alcohol sentimentality, Larry invites Sammy to come home with him "and meet the wife." But the wife is in bed and the introduction is deferred until morning—at which unholy time, Larry arises, makes the 7:46 and forgets to tell his wife about the new-found friend. What happens to Sammy that day, with a party of suffragettes and an irritable constable, makes the delightful, chuckling, story of "The Commuters."

This was one of the many good releases that are being shown at Myers Theatre and deserved a larger audience than it received.

POLITICAL TRUCE IN IRELAND DURING WAR SERIOUSLY ENDANGERED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Dublin, June 24.—The political truce established in Ireland during the war is seriously endangered because of the preference given the Ulster leaders in the new coalition cabinet. Resolutions condemning the appointment of Carson, Bonar Law and P. E. Smith are being passed in all provinces except in the northern and protestant end of the island. Not only societies and political organizations, but city and local councils join in the protest.

The Kildare County Council unanimously adopted the following: "We regard with grave apprehension the recent changes in the government of the country, involving as they do the inclusion in place of high power and authority of the most virlent enemy of our people, and a declared lawbreaker. We consider this step as a direct insult to the great majority of Irishmen, and must express our surprise that the leading statesmen in England should sanction such a course at a time when thousands of Irish nationalists are sacrificing their lives to maintain the integrity of the British Empire."

The Granard District Council made a similar protest.

The opinion of the political organization in the country should be got ready for any emergency is becoming popular.

Fatal Mishap.

"Ladies an' gen'l'men," said Sam Johnson to the invited guests who had filled his cabin to overflowing since 8 p. m., "I'm mighty sorry to have to tell you all that there ain't goin' to be no party tonight, 'cause that white man what owed me 15 cents ain't paid me yet!"

MORRIS MILLER

Reggie Walker, the South African, who won the Olympic 100-meter championship in London in 1908, is back in Durban, Natal, after six months' service in the mounted section of the Kimberley regiment against the Germans in South Africa. He may return to the service, but at last reports he was contemplating going to England to arrange a match with W. R. Applegarth, who has twice defeated Jack Donaldson for the professional sprint championship.

Lawson Robertson, the Irish-American A. C. coach, is somewhat of a joker. He says that when he was an amateur he wore a calico on his chest breaking the tape so often.

Commenting on the fact that Charlie Smith had let him slip off of the roster of the Washington club, Germany Schaefer arises to make these remarks: "I used to think Cliff had wonderful judgment, but I think differently now. You know he would let me go. That meant that he would have to let some of his men go. And he let me out and kept such dubs as Walter Johnson, Clyde Miller and Eddie Foster. Alas, that convincing proof his judgment is punk."

Because of the good showing he made against Mike Gibbons a couple of weeks ago, Soldier Bartfield, generally regarded as a second-rate fighter, is now in line for a return engagement with Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul phantom, in New York. The return bout will net Bartfield many shekels if Gibbons consents to the go. Critics who saw Bartfield in his first bout with Gibbons assert that the soldier actually outboxed the celebrated St. Paul fighter in many rounds.

"Yes," remarked Hughie Jennings thoughtfully, "fewer ball players are driving motor cars this year. They have discovered that motoring is very bad for the batting eye. Only Cobb and Crawford of my team drive them."

Sir Hiram Maxim, when a young man, contemplated becoming a prize fighter. Perhaps it was his acquaintance with fight managers that inspired him to invent his famous silencer.

"Gabby" Cravath, outfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, has invented a new kind of glove for backstops. The glove is much lighter than the heavy, cumbersome ones now in general vogue. The padding in it consists of good hair, he says, that with his new glove the backstop will not feel a sting from the hardest pitched ball.

American Association fans will welcome the news that Bill Friel, who managed the St. Paul disappoinments last season, is to be added to the A. A. umpire staff. Friel's talent as an umpire is well known. Two years ago Jimmy McAleer recommended him to Ban Johnson, but nothing came of it. Incidentally the Association can stand a couple of good umpires, as the staff is very weak.

COMMITTEE ENDORSES JITNEY REGULATION

Wisconsin Legislature May Adopt Measure to Regulate New Form of Common Carriers.

Madison, Wis., June 25.—Urgent restrictions on jitney busses is the policy the Wisconsin legislature should adopt for the regulation of this new form of transportation service, embodying the recommendations of the senate committee on corporations, which has finally submitted a substitute bill to the judiciary committee bill, 484-S, on the subject. Bill 582-S, on the same subject, is recommended for killing.

Motor vehicles carrying passengers for hire are declared by the new bill to be common carriers, required to furnish adequate service at just and reasonable rates, and to operate over such general routes, or within such territory, and upon such schedules, and during such hours as may reasonably be required for the accommodation of the public.

At the bearing a few weeks ago, representatives of the leading traction lines in Wisconsin declared their companies were suffering such loss of revenue by jitney competition that higher fares might have to be the ultimate resort.

Not the least of the stringent provisions of the substitute bill is a requirement that each jitney furnish a bond of $2,000 for each passenger capable of being carried. A car carrying only five persons would be bonded at $10,000. The bond shall contain the condition that the indemnity company issuing it may be joined as a defendant in any action to recover damages, and it may be joined as a defendant in any action to recover damages, and it may be recoverable upon from time to time until the full penalty has been exhausted. The bond must be accepted by the railroad commission as condition precedent, and shall state the name and residence of applicant, proposed route or territory, schedule, and rate of fare to be charged. The bond is to be accepted by the railroad commission and a certificate to operate issued only when the commission determines that the rates specified are reasonable, that the proposed route or territory to be covered is reasonable, and the schedule of operation is reasonably adapted to the accommodation of the public. The law for violating any of the provisions set forth in the bond.

the bill proposes, shall range from $10 to $100.

MOUNT CARMEL HEAVILY ENTRENCHED BY TURKS IS A SACRED MOUNTAIN

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Jerusalem, June 25.—Mount Carmel, whose lower slopes have already been under French shell fire, is heavily entrenched by the Turks, although the mountain is sacred alike to Christian and Moslem. On the lower slopes is situated the town of Haifa. The German consulate in the town was bombarded by the French in retaliation for the Germans desecrating the graves of the soldiers of Napoleon.

Carmel is a hill, or rather a group of hills, bounded on two sides by the Mediterranean and overlooking the plain of Kishon. Above the town stands the famous Carmelite monastery. On the summit of the Mount, the German colony of Haifa, which came there sixty years ago to await the second coming of Christ, has erected a monument to commemorate the visit of the Kaiser.

Haifa is an important point, as it is the terminus of a branch of railway tapping the Hedjaz line, which crosses the desert regions between Damascus and Medina. This railway, spanning the Jordan river, is used by the Turks to transport Arab troops.

Haifa is an important point, as it is the terminus of a branch of railway tapping the Hedjaz line, which crosses the desert regions between Damascus and Medina. This railway, spanning the Jordan river, is used by the Turks to transport Arab troops.

stands the famous Carmelite monastery. On the summit of the Mount, the German colony of Haifa, which came there sixty years ago to await the second coming of Christ, has erected a monument to commemorate the visit of the Kaiser.

CHINA'S MILITARY FORCES ARE TO BE REMODELED IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Peking, June 25.—China's military forces are to be remodeled from top to bottom. As a first step, arms of the line regiments are to be unified.

A most important conference has just been held at the winter palace, the residence of Yuan-Shi-kai. There were present, in addition to the president and his cabinet and the highest ranking military and naval officers, several of the most influential Chinese not officially connected with the government.

Problems of national defense were touched upon in a brief speech by the president, who made it clear that he regarded war as the greatest among apparently necessary evils. His words made a deep impression upon those present, and in the discussion which followed, there was absolutely single-mindedness in endorsing Yuan's position. The conference decided that new docks were absolutely necessary; that the arsenals must be modernized and expanded; that service in the army must be popularized; that coast defenses must be established, and where obsolete or inadequate, reconstructed; and that naval bases must be provided for north and south China.

The principal decision, however, was that providing for the unification of Chinese armaments. The six army divisions, investigation has proved, use ten or more different types of guns. It is proposed to replace these with one style which will possess the best features of the best modern weapon.

GOVERNING COMMITTEE OF REPUBLICAN ALLIANCE ADOPT WAR MOVEMENT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Paris, June 25.—The governing committee of the Republican Alliance proposes that a single design be adopted for a monument to the French dead of the European war, to be selected, reproduced and erected, in different sizes, in all the cemeteries of France. Artists and sculptors have risen up against this proposition, horrified at the monotony of a uniform design of monument in every town and village.
